OVER THE YEAR 2013, The Collins Foundation made 268 grants totaling just over $9 million. These grants were made to organizations located in all parts of Oregon and serving a wide variety of missions to benefit the people and communities of this state.

I noted in our annual report last year that 2013 would hold a significant transition on our Board of Trustees. In April, my mother, Maribeth Collins, transitioned to the role of Trustee Emeritus after serving as an active Trustee for 49 years and President for 41. Also in April, my niece, Alayna Luria, was elected to the Board. She has been a Member of the Foundation since 2005 and is proving to be a thoughtful contributor to our work.

Because of these significant changes, our 2013 Annual Report features a conversation with my mother and Alayna that highlights some of the changes in our foundation, in the nonprofit environment, and in Oregon between the times when they each became a Trustee. The year 1964, when my mother became both a Trustee and President after the death of my father, is a significant one for me because it was also the year that I was born, which makes the comparison of the current environment with that particular year especially meaningful for me.

As always, I would like to say how much I appreciate the dedication of our entire staff to this work and to the betterment of Oregon. It would be hard to overstate how much I appreciate working with these people in particular and more generally with those in the nonprofit community who work tirelessly to make our state a better place.

THE YEAR 2013 WAS ONE OF TRANSITIONS and discovery for The Collins Foundation. Early in the year Maribeth Collins transitioned to Trustee Emeritus after 49 years of exemplary service to the Foundation. We remain grateful to Maribeth for her thoughtful leadership over many decades. She continues to be active with the Foundation, and she will always remain our spiritual leader, which is a gift to all of us.

In welcoming our newest Trustee last spring, we discovered that transitions can be smooth and also refreshing. Alayna Luria, who represents the fourth generation of Collins family members to serve on the Board of Trustees, has brought a valued, and younger, perspective to the board room. Having participated in Trustee meetings for several years before this transition, she stepped into her new role with ease and finesse.

Last fall we completed a demographic study of our 2012 grants, which was among the most enlightening, if challenging, efforts we have undertaken. Collecting demographic information is difficult work, and we learned more about that than we ever imagined. While this is not something we have the staff or systems to do consistently in the near term, it provided us with a good start in understanding who is being reached by the Foundation's grants and where we could be doing more.

Our demographic self-study also became the centerpiece for our 2013 fall retreat, which focused on the themes of diversity, equity, and inclusion in relation to The Collins Foundation. These can be challenging topics for foundations, especially family foundations. At The Collins Foundation, we are discovering how these themes can be better reflected and expressed in our work as a grantmaker, collaborator, community member, and nonprofit. It's an exciting time for us.

Oregon is evolving, and so are we.

LEGACY SERVICE RESPECT

How does a foundation started by a family stay true to the philanthropic spirit of its founders, but still remain relevant in a changing world? Since 1947, the Collins family's quest to remain responsive and meaningful has infused the work of The Collins Foundation through transitions, both internal and external.

Fifty years ago Maribeth Collins stepped in quietly to continue her husband's work as President of The Collins Foundation after his unexpected death. Through half a century of service, she has influenced the character of the Foundation, keeping alive the legacy of her husband, Truman Collins Sr., while building her own.

In April, Maribeth transitioned to Trustee Emeritus status. At the same time, her granddaughter, Alayna Luria, joined the Foundation Board, the fourth generation to serve. The two women sat down recently, along with Cynthia Addams, Executive Vice President, to discuss how the Foundation has evolved to meet the changing needs of Oregon, and how the Founders' mission continues.

It’s a beautiful winter day. Grandmother and granddaughter sit next to each other in Maribeth’s living room, Cynthia close by. A stand of tall trees is visible through the window, a surprise bit of forest this close in to Portland, but a fitting reminder of the family’s roots.

They start at the beginning.

“I have always been astounded by the story of how my grandfather died so suddenly, and you had to pick up, raise your teenagers, and run the Foundation. And on top of that, you were pregnant! It taught me so much about how to carry on after something tragic happens,” says Alayna.

Maribeth recalls her invitation to join the Board. “I’d never even been to a meeting. I was completely surprised. But then I thought, if I can learn, I’ll be carrying on something that Truman really cared about, something he started. So I plunged in.”

The Foundation was small then. There was no staff, and meetings were held as needed. During 1964, Maribeth’s first year, the Foundation made 34 grants totaling $181,425. But the Foundation slowly began to grow.

“Through the years we’ve always had the right person appear at the right time,” says Maribeth. Each person brought skills and experience to help shape the Foundation. Over time, each generation made its own contributions to the Foundation, carefully building on its predecessor’s strengths. The respect for the generations — of family, staff, and Board members — who came before is a hallmark of the Foundation.

“Each time someone new would join, I would wonder if they would fit in. Somehow, they always did,” says Maribeth. “I have such admiration for everybody on the board and staff. We’re individuals and have different opinions, but we can always come to a consensus. We have the most wonderful spirit.”

A RESPECT FOR PERSPECTIVE

“Debates can be lively, but they are approached with an attitude of respect, learning, and appreciation for different perspectives,” says Cynthia. The Board brings a wide range of experience and interests to the meetings. “But still, it’s a family foundation, with a specific approach to decision making: detailed, heart-centered, compassionate, and respectful of those doing the work.”

“There seems to be an ethos of communication, collaboration, and respect that has carried on through the generations,” says Alayna. “From the start I’ve felt like I could say what was on my mind.”

Alayna comes to the Board with a background in grantwriting and a master’s in social work, along with some experience in making grants. Still, like Maribeth, her invitation was relatively unexpected. Shortly after Alayna and her wife moved to Portland in 2004, Alayna’s uncle, Truman Collins Jr., invited her to become a Member of the Foundation. At first she was slow to get involved, busy caring for her own young children.

“Then I had a moment where I decided, because I have small children, I really want to be more involved in the family and the Foundation,” says Alayna. “For me, that meant finding someone to watch the children so I could be present at all-day Foundation meetings and convenings.” She began to prepare for and attend all the meetings and, in April 2013, became a Trustee.

“Since becoming a Trustee, I feel like I have more of an ‘official’ place at the table. Still, I’m humbled by the amount of experience in the other Trustees. I can see that I have a lot to learn and look forward to that,” she says.

Smooth transitions are a trademark of the Foundation’s board. Maribeth’s niece, Lee Diane Collins Vest, was the last newcomer to the Board before Alayna. She, too, participated and learned before becoming a Trustee eight years ago. The average tenure for Trustees is over 20 years: Founding Trustee Grace Goudy’s term was just a few months shorter than Maribeth’s 49 years.

“There seems to be an ethos of communication, collaboration, and respect that has carried on through the generations.”

AN EVOLVING LEGACY

This stability has helped the Board weather volatility in the economy and respond to trends impacting communities around the state. Today there are twice as many people living in Oregon as there were 50 years ago, and they come from a wider variety of backgrounds than ever before. Foundations working to address the needs and opportunities of an increasingly diverse state are called to serve in new ways.

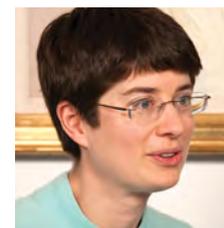

“The Foundation has always focused on underserved communities,” says Alayna. “But today there is even more interest in culturally specific organizations and organizations that are working to become more culturally responsive and inclusive in their work.”

“The Foundation continues to learn from its environment and adapt its practices accordingly — both are essential to effective grantmaking,” says Cynthia.

Increased knowledge has resulted in the Foundation bringing the values of diversity, equity, and inclusion to the forefront of Board and staff discussions in recent years. Since 2011 the Foundation has been increasingly more intentional about making grants to underrepresented communities.

Understanding new issues and learning to see the world from a new perspective is key to the Foundation’s evolution. Alayna credits her grandmother with a lot of this spirit.

“She is just very committed to learning, and that has been a leading force for us. The Foundation has given a lot of first grants to places.” She turns to her grandmother. “You’re always taking new things in and incorporating them into your worldview. I think that’s rare.”

Understanding and learning are also important to the grantmaking process. Alayna was struck by the due diligence and detail given to each organization.

“Whether it’s a really small, new organization or a nonprofit with a lot of history, where it would be easy to rubberstamp it, the staff works effectively to make sure we have a full understanding,” she says.

The due diligence process is meticulous and respectful. Each Trustee reads the full proposal. At the meetings, staff members provide additional information from research, community conversations, and site visits.

“Being able to see firsthand the good work that organizations are doing, instead of just the expression on paper, is important in understanding the people being served and the issues being addressed,” says Cynthia.

It’s also time consuming for the Foundation’s staff, which visits close to half of the agencies in each grant cycle. This involves traveling to several different communities and regions across Oregon — including Southern, Central, and Eastern Oregon and the Coast.

“I think my grant-writing background probably gives me some sympathy for what people go through to prepare these grant requests, knowing that there are people with very different skill levels who are asked to step up and do this for one reason or another,” says Alayna. “What I didn’t fully realize when I was writing grants was just how important things other than the grant proposal are. As Trustees, it is critical that we get to the heart of the work being done, even beyond what may be included in a proposal.”

The philanthropic community in which Alayna begins her service is much more complex than the world where Maribeth first worked with the Foundation. In 1964 The Collins Foundation was one of only 55 foundations in Oregon; there were only a few hundred nonprofits. Today there are more than 18,000 nonprofits. The number of foundations has increased twentyfold.

With thousands of nonprofits and foundations doing good work, it takes far more commitment and research to understand the roles of individual organizations, how they fill a vital community need, and whether they are collaborating with other organizations or overlapping.

“It takes time to be a good community member and partner, as opposed to simply being a funder,” says Cynthia. “Our outreach really is done on a personal basis, as we focus on building relationships.”

The relationships have brought new opportunities to partner with other foundations. The Chalkboard Project is one such endeavor that is sponsored by a consortium of independent Oregon foundations. Spearheaded by Foundations for a Better Oregon, Chalkboard is the organization’s primary education transformation initiative. Its new program, TeachOregon, launched in 2013. TeachOregon works with several school districts and universities to prepare Oregon’s next generation of teachers. An important component of this initiative is building a diverse pool of teachers to better reflect today’s student population, a community currently made up of around 35% students of color.

Even with the changing landscape, one thing that remains constant is the Foundation’s remarkably resilient mission to improve the quality of life in Oregon. Grants have spanned the state, moving from the metropolitan Portland base outward to communities large and small. As a general-purpose foundation, it makes grants that touch a wide range of charitable areas: arts and humanities; children and youth; community welfare; education; environment; health and science; and religion.

Responding to community needs and opportunities reflected outside the Metro area has long been of interest. “I’ve always responded to the small grants in remote areas,” says Maribeth. “Small grants in rural areas can have a huge impact. They may have an art center and want to bring in an artist or artists for residencies. I just love projects like these — so often they involve the entire community.” Supporting the arts in communities, the work of artists, and the work of nonprofits to better their communities through art have been particular interests for Maribeth.

Alayna gestures toward the abstract art in her grandmother’s living room. “Look at your house. I’ve probably learned more about art from you than anyone else. I remember your taking me to the Contemporary Crafts Gallery. It’s one of my first memories of seeing creative work in Portland. I always knew that was a special place.” The Contemporary Crafts Gallery, now the Museum of Contemporary Craft, was an early grantee of the Foundation.

A NEW GENERATION OF SERVICE

Each generation comes to the Foundation in its own way. In Maribeth's case, her husband's unexpected death thrust her into the work.

"Looking back after all these 50 years, I don't know of anything I could have been involved in that I would have found more satisfying," says Maribeth. "It was the last thing I ever thought I'd spend my life doing, but I can't imagine not being involved now."

For Alayna, it was a gradual process. Her mother, Cheri Collins Smith, was diligent in educating her children about how the Foundation — and she, as a Trustee — contributed to the community. "Still, I don't think it was until I was a teenager that I started noticing all the places in Portland that had some link to the Foundation — like OMSI or the library," says Alayna. "Then I began asking my mother more about the Foundation. It was just one part of learning about our family."

With three young children, Alayna has her own example to set. "For now, I just want them to know how lucky we are to be able to help other people. I've tried to frame it like it's a cool thing to do."

Alayna shares the same sense of responsibility and duty that created the Foundation so many decades ago. And she is looking toward the future. "I'm the oldest member of my generation, and I've spent a considerable amount of time thinking about how it's all going to look in 25 years."

She credits her grandmother with being a good model. "How you've led your life, the things you've been involved in, how devoted you've been to your family and to the Foundation — I couldn't think of a better example to follow," she tells Maribeth.

"You always knew our grandfather's values and you passed them down to your children. But because he created the Foundation, we have a structure, an organization that is the embodiment of what his values were in the beginning. That can't help but guide the family as the generations go on," she says.

"I think it's wonderful that we share this family spirit and want to be part of the Foundation. I'm just delighted that you're a Trustee," says Maribeth. "I sometimes feel sad that Truman isn't here. Without him, we wouldn't be doing any of this. We've grown into quite a family."

Alayna responds, "I can't think that he would be anything less than amazed and thrilled with how things have turned out."

"Looking back after all these 50 years, I don't know of anything I could have been involved in that I would have found more satisfying."

The Foundation

The Collins Foundation was founded in 1947 by four members of the Collins family. The purpose of the Foundation, as stated in the documents of incorporation, is to operate and use its funds exclusively for charitable, educational, literary, scientific, or religious purposes.

Note 1: Summary of Significant Accounting Policies

Basis of Accounting The accompanying financial statements have been prepared on the method of accounting used for federal excise tax purposes. The revenues (except unrealized net gains on investments) and expenditures (except federal excise tax) are recognized when received or when paid. Consequently, certain revenues and expenses are recognized in the determination of income in different reporting periods than they would be if the financial statements were prepared in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles. Although income tax rules are used to determine the timing of revenues and expenses, nontaxable revenues and nondeductible expenses are included in the determination of net income. As with all tax presentations, these tax accounting methods are subject to review and possible adjustment by the Internal Revenue Service.

Investments Investments in marketable securities are stated on the basis of current quoted market prices. Investment transactions are recognized on a settlement date basis. Investment transactions under such basis are not materially different from those that would be recognized on a trade date basis. Realized gains and losses are calculated based on the average cost method for both financial statement and tax return purposes. Unrealized gains or losses are recorded for the increase or decrease in the market value of assets from the beginning of the year to the end of the year.

Investments in limited partnerships and real estate funds are stated at estimated fair values provided by the managers of the interests.

The Foundation also invests in numerous partnerships, in which the Foundation is a limited partner, that specialize in making venture capital, buyout, distressed debt, and equity-based real estate investments. Such investments, typically investments in private equity or debt securities of companies or properties that are not publicly listed or traded, are not liquid investments. The value of such investments is determined by the partnerships' general partners, who must follow the valuation guidelines, such as appraisals and comparable company trade data, stipulated in the respective limited partnership agreements and in accordance with fair value accounting. The December 31 valuations of the investments in limited partnerships are based upon the value determined by the partnerships' general partner as of September 30, adjusted for capital contributions and distributions that occur during the quarter ended December 31. These amounts may differ from values that would be determined if the investments in limited partnerships were publicly traded or if the December 31 valuation amount were currently available. Realized gains and losses and unrealized changes in the fair value of investments in limited partnerships are reflected in the statement of revenue, expense and changes in net assets. The majority of limited partnerships are audited annually by independent public accounting firms. The Foundation is committed to invest funds into these partnerships. As of December 31, 2013, the Foundation has $2.6 million in outstanding limited partnership commitments, including both domestic and international partnerships.

Program-Related Investment Program-related investment consists of a preferred stock, which facilitates charitable activities. It is stated at cost, which approximates market value.

Grants Grants are recorded as expenditures in the year paid. Unpaid grants include grants with a payable date after year end, and grants in which the restriction or matching requirement has not been met at year end. Unpaid grants are included in unrestricted net assets. Grants are generally approved subject to certain conditions. If these conditions are not met, or if the program or project approved for a grant needs less than the amount approved, grants may be refunded or canceled. Cancellations or refunds are recognized in the year in which they occur.

Use of Estimates The preparation of financial statements requires management to make estimates and assumptions that affect the reported amounts of assets and liabilities and disclosure of contingent assets and liabilities at the date of the financial statements and the reported amounts of revenues and expenses during the reporting period. Actual results could differ from those estimates.

Subsequent Events The Foundation has evaluated subsequent events through March 20, 2014, which is the date these financial statements were available to be issued. Events, if any, are disclosed within the notes to these financial statements.

Note 2: Cash and Cash Equivalents

Cash equivalents consist of highly liquid instruments such as money market accounts and certificates of deposit, with maturities of less than three months. Cash equivalents are recorded at cost, which approximates market value.

Cash and cash equivalents consist of the following at December 31:

	2013	2012
Cash – interest bearing	$689,525	$1,417,592

Note 3: Concentration of Credit Risk

The Foundation's assets consist of cash, equity securities, corporate obligations, limited partnership interests, and real estate funds. These financial instruments may subject the Foundation to concentrations of risk as, at various times during the year, cash balances may exceed amounts insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation; the market value of securities is dependent on the ability of the issuer to honor its contractual commitments; and the investments are subject to changes in market values.

Note 4: Investments

Investments consist of the following at December 31:

	2013		2012
	Cost	Market	Cost	Market
Invested cash and cash equivalents	$ 5,764,708	$ 5,764,708	$ 6,332,846	$ 6,332,846
Common and preferred stock	106,539,377	150,837,321	99,001,674	118,857,275
Corporate obligations	14,692,117	14,309,321	13,954,441	14,253,488
Limited partnership interests	30,322,911	37,578,368	29,931,028	34,075,998
Real estate funds	5,000,000	5,035,644	5,000,000	4,637,964
Total	$162,319,113	$213,525,362	$154,219,989	$178,157,571

Invested cash and cash equivalents include cash and money market funds held by the Foundation's investment managers.

Note 5: Provision for Excise and Income Tax

The Collins Foundation is classified as a private foundation as defined in the Tax Reform Act of 1986. The provisions of the Internal Revenue Code exempt the Foundation from federal and state income taxes. The Foundation is subject to federal and state tax on unrelated business income. The Foundation is subject to a federal excise tax of 2% on net investment income. If the average payout ratio for the past five years plus 1% of net investment income in the current year is less than the current year's charitable distributions, federal excise tax is payable at 1% of net investment income.

The Foundation paid federal excise tax of 1% in 2013 and 1% in 2012.

The net liabilities for excise and income taxes consist of the following at December 31:

	2013	2012
Current	$187,193	$ 94,893
Deferred	(272,687)	(110,260)
Total	($459,880)	($205,153)

The deferred excise tax consists of excise tax on unrealized gains or losses on investments.

For 2013 and 2012 the Foundation had qualifying distributions of $9,894,492 and $9,037,741, respectively. As of December 31, 2013, the Foundation had qualifying distributions of $501,196 in excess of the minimum requirement to meet distribution regulations of the Internal Revenue Code for private foundations. As of December 31, 2012, distributions were in excess of the minimum requirements by $233,125.

Note 6: Pension Plan

The Foundation has a defined contribution salary deferral plan covering all eligible employees. The elective contributions to the plan are funded by voluntary salary reductions of the participants. The Foundation contributes 10% of all eligible employees' compensation. Pension expense during 2013 and 2012 was $45,107 and $40,921, respectively.

Note 7: Commitments

Rental expense under the current lease for the Foundation's office space for 2013 and 2012 amounted to $100,411 and $87,419, respectively. At December 31, 2013, commitments for future minimum payments under this lease agreement, which expires on January 31, 2015, are $109,993 for 2014 and $9,198 for 2015.

Note 8: Supplemental Disclosure of Cash Flow Information

Cash paid for federal and state taxes was $195,900 for 2013 and $30,000 for 2012.

Note 9: Investment and Grant Administration

The classification of administrative expenses between investment and grant expenses is determined by specific identification or an allocation based on time expended.

Report on the Financial Statements

We have audited the accompanying financial statements of The Collins Foundation, which comprise the statement of assets, liabilities, and net assets – income tax basis as of December 31, 2013 and 2012, and the related statements of revenue, expense, and changes in net assets – income tax basis, cash flows – income tax basis, and grants for the years then ended, and the related notes to the financial statements.

As described in Note 1, these financial statements were prepared on the basis of accounting the Foundation uses for income tax purposes, which is a comprehensive basis of accounting other than generally accepted accounting principles.

Management's Responsibility for the Financial Statements

Management is responsible for the preparation and fair presentation of these financial statements in accordance with the basis of accounting described in Note 1; this includes the design, implementation, and maintenance of internal control relevant to the preparation and fair presentation of financial statements that are free from material misstatement, whether due to fraud or error.

Auditor's Responsibility

Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audit. We conducted our audit in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America. Those standards require that we plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements are free from material misstatement.

An audit involves performing procedures to obtain audit evidence about the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. The procedures selected depend on the auditor's judgment, including the assessment of the risks of material misstatement of the financial statements, whether due to fraud or error. In making those risk assessments, the auditor considers internal control relevant to the entity's preparation and fair presentation of the financial statements in order to design audit procedures that are appropriate in the circumstances, but not for the purpose of expressing an opinion on the effectiveness of the entity's internal control. Accordingly, we express no such opinion. An audit also includes evaluating the appropriateness of accounting policies used and the reasonableness of significant accounting estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall presentation of the financial statements.

We believe that the audit evidence we have obtained is sufficient and appropriate to provide a basis for our audit opinion.

In our opinion, the financial statements referred to above present fairly, in all material respects, the assets, liabilities, and net assets of The Collins Foundation as of December 31, 2013 and 2012, and the revenue, expense, and changes in net assets and its cash flows for the years then ended, on the basis of accounting described in Note 1.

Other Matter

Our audit was conducted for the purpose of forming an opinion on the financial statements as a whole. The accompanying supplementary financial information is presented for purposes of additional analysis and is not a required part of the financial statements. Such information is the responsibility of management and was derived from and relates directly to the underlying accounting and other records used to prepare the financial statements. The information has been subjected to the auditing procedures applied in the audit of the financial statements and certain additional procedures, including comparing and reconciling such information directly to the underlying accounting and other records used to prepare the financial statement or to the financial statements themselves, and other additional procedures in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America. In our opinion, the information is fairly stated in all material respects in relation to the financial statements as a whole.

Grant Policies and Guidelines

The Collins Foundation is an independent, private foundation that was created in 1947 by Truman W. Collins Sr. and other members of the family of E. S. Collins. The Foundation exists to improve, enrich, and give greater expression to humanitarian endeavors in the state of Oregon and to assist in improving the quality of life in the state.

As a general-purpose, responsive grantmaker, the Foundation serves people in urban and rural communities across Oregon through its grants to nonprofit organizations working for the common good. The Foundation's broad areas of interest include arts and humanities, children and youth, community welfare, education, environment, health and science, and religion.

Eligibility Requirements

The Collins Foundation is committed to equal opportunity for all persons regardless of race, color, national origin, religion, sex, sexual orientation and gender identity, age, disability, or any other legally protected status. It is our intent to consider grant requests only from organizations and agencies that pursue these same principles in their governance, employment practices, and services.

The Foundation recognizes that the issue of discrimination is more complex and nuanced than a single policy can convey. Requests may be considered from organizations that have convictions or beliefs of conscience that may not be entirely consistent with the Foundation's values around inclusion. However, organizations that require board members, employees, volunteers, or those receiving services to adhere to specific religious beliefs or lifestyles will automatically be subject to additional scrutiny for eligibility based on the assumption that such requirements are likely to be discriminatory and not compatible with the Foundation's policies or practices.

Grant requests are considered only from organizations/agencies that have established their tax-exempt status under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, and are not "private foundations" as defined under section 509(a) of the Code, or that have tax exemption as a governmental or other publicly funded entity.

- Grant requests are considered only from nonprofit organizations/agencies that have current registration with the offices of the Oregon State Attorney General and the Secretary of State.
- Grants are made only for projects that directly benefit the residents of Oregon.
- Grants are not made to specific individuals.

Policy Guidelines

- The Foundation will consider only one grant request from the same organization in a twelve-month period, unless an additional request is invited by the Foundation.
- The Foundation normally will not consider an additional grant request from an organization receiving a multi-year grant until twelve months following the final payment of the multi-year grant.
- Grants normally are not made to elementary, secondary, or public higher education institutions; or to individual religious congregations.
- Grants normally are not made for development office personnel, annual fundraising activities, endowments, operational deficits, financial emergencies, or debt retirement.
- In considering applications for substantial projects, the Foundation prefers to participate with other donors and encourages the applicant to seek support from other sources to share in the total project.

Application Procedures

Grant application procedures and the required application checklist are available at www.collinsfoundation.org.

Application Review

Foundation trustees meet six times annually to make decisions on grant requests. Foundation staff acknowledges each request received and informs eligible applicants of the date anticipated for consideration by the trustees. Once a request has been funded or declined, the applicant is notified promptly. Rarely is a grant decision deferred. When this occurs, however, the applicant is provided with an explanation and further instructions.

The grant review process begins after receiving a completed application and usually requires eight to twelve weeks, provided the applicant has complied fully with the application procedures. The submission of an incomplete grant proposal may cause delays in the Foundation's review and consideration of the request.

During the grant review period, Foundation staff may request an interview or a site visit in order to gain more information about the agency and its proposal. Additional written material may also be requested. Throughout this time, applicants are encouraged to notify the Foundation of any changes in the status of the project under review, including its funding.

The Collins Foundation endeavors to serve people throughout Oregon. Despite this commitment, the Foundation is unable to support every request received. Denial of a grant should not necessarily be considered a reflection on the quality of a project or the worthiness of its sponsor.

Grant Reporting

Every organization receiving a grant from The Collins Foundation has a responsibility to report on the use of the funds granted. Reporting guidelines are provided with each of the Foundation's grant awards and are available for review on the Foundation's website.

Unless otherwise indicated at the time disbursement is made, reports are required annually until the entire grant has been expended. Failure to report as required by the Foundation could influence future grant decisions by the trustees.
